For an advertised “damage likely” trip we had a good turn out . By the time we reached the Carnage Canyon Trailhead, we had eighteen vehicles lined up and ready for the rocks in front of us. We had just gotten our hearts started, as we were only a few hundred yards into the trail, when we came upon former club member Scott Ellinger and his group of five vehicles stopped in the trail. The group in front of theirs was stopped to fix a broken axle on a pickup truck. The boys in the big rigs amused themselves by playing on the “big rocks”.

When we started moving again, there were a lot of smiles and lots of talk on the CB. It was amazing that so many different lines could be driven in such a narrow canyon. Several times we had to break out the snatching straps or winch to drag someone that was high centered off a rock. About halfway through the trail we were stopped in our tracks again due to another broken axle on a Jeep in Scotts group. We figured that it was good time to eat our lunch while repairs were made.

The rest of the trail was anticlimactic. Somewhere along the way, Roger S. put a crooked smile back in the bumper on his Toyota. No one else reported any damage. It turned out to be a great day on the rocks in Carnage Canyon for all our club members. When we gathered at the top , it started to rain. On the way down to the highway, we saw the fencing that the Trailridge Runners 4WDC had put up as part of their Lefthand Canyon Grant Project. All in all, it was just another great 4 wheeling day with the Mountaineer Family.

Seven Mile Trail Is Open

On July 3rd, nine volunteer Mountaineers showed up to string barbed wire in the meadow on Seven Mile. The forest Service contractor had reworked the meadow. A culvert was installed under the road for the creek and the mud hole was filled in. The creek was lined with big rocks and several aspen trees along with a few pine trees were planted. The last part of the project was to install a new fence along the road and that is why the Mountaineers were called in. I must say the meadow is no longer an eyesore and as soon as the grass grows back it will be beautiful again. A special thanks goes out to: Mike, Lori and Travis Golly, Steve Carlson, Brett Newton, Troy White, Shane Payton, Dave Piller and Craig Stumbough for giving up part of their holiday weekend to work on this worthwhile project.

Crystal Mountain Re-Visited

We have heard that the Forest Service has issued 7 tickets to the 4 land owners that have been trying to close off Crystal Mountain to motorized users. The charges range from harassment to improving a Forest Service road without a permit. To add insult to injury, the Larimer County Sheriff has also issued several tickets to the same people. Stay tuned, we will keep you informed.

We just hope that they get heavier penalties than the man that cut down over a hundred trees in Left Hand Canyon to block a trail. On June 23rd, he was sentenced to one year of probation and 50 hours of community service!
